ABOUT

The Idaho Chiefs of Police Association (ICOPA) is a public voice on social and professional issues related to law enforcement in the state of Idaho. The Association represents chiefs, officers and others from the 79 local Idaho communities and police departments. The Association strives to serve as a resource to its members by supporting training on state-of-the-art concepts in policing and by providing representation for the general good of law enforcement at the local, state, and federal levels.

Our Annual Conference serves as an opportunity to bring the entire Association Membership together for leadership development and networking with other agencies from across the state. We have a schedule that includes dynamic and knowledgeable speakers, various breakout sessions for more in-depth training, and an opportunity to gain a deeper understanding of the advocacy work completed in the Legislative Session.

SPONSORSHIP LEVELS

Being a sponsor of our Annual Conference is an opportunity to meet and connect with Law Enforcement Command across Idaho. These are the decision-makers who help determine their departments' resource needs and help inform which Requests for Proposals (RFP) to send out for bid.

If you are interested in sponsoring a full day of the conference, please reach out and we will provide that information separately.
